The thirty-first edition of the Head Of The Charles

On behalf of the Trustees of the regatta, I welcome you to the thirty-first edition of the Head Of The Charles. It is our hope that you will enjoy a day packed with world-class racing on the Charles River along with plenty of food, fun and socializing with friends from afar as well as close to home.

We are especially pleased to be celebrating our sixth season with BayBank as the event's presenting sponsor. Once again, we would like to thank Chairman and President William M. Crozier, Jr. for his support of this New England tradition which was in danger of extinction in nineteen ninety. Through the bank's efforts, the Head Of The Charles has not only stabilized financially but has grown in positive ways these past five years. By most standards, the regatta has become the template by which other "head races" are measured; in large part because of the boost we received from our sponsor.

Preparation for nineteen ninety-five's regatta has involved thousands of hours of volunteer time throughout the year and recently, the hard work of the Metropolitan District Commission which has immaculately groomed the shores of the Charles so that we may all take pleasure from one of the state's finest resources, the Charles River Basin. Our special thanks to MDC Commissioner David B. Balfour, Jr. and to Director of Operations, Brian Kerins, Deputy director and his staff for their meticulous assistance on the grounds and water. The rowing community is indeed fortunate to have such an ideal physical environment on which to compete.

In conjunction with the on-going efforts of the MDC, this year we would also like to recognize the goals and lifework of the Charles River Watershed Association. Partnering with BayBank today in co-hosting an environmental tent near the Eliot bridge, this respected organization plays an integral role in the monitoring and preservation of the Charles River. We owe a debt of gratitude to this group for its job as local "river-keeper." Look on the site map inside this guide to locate their tent. I know they would like you to drop in for a visit.

Today's racing will be excellent and we encourage you to follow the schedule within this booklet to watch some of the best rowers in the world as they vie for one of the most coveted citations in the world of sport: the Head Of The Charles regatta first place prize. These handsome bronze medals are proudly collected by athletes from around the globe as our race has become an important objective for oarsmen and women to achieve the title of "Head Of The Charles."

Please recognize these competitors vigorously as they pass you today. They deserve your cheers and encouragement! ♦

Foreign Crews add to the world's largest regatta

Increasing numbers of foreign competitors compete each year at the Head Of The Charles. Canadians, such as Paul

The Growing International Presence

by Chip Davis

Ever since the first Head Of The Charles was held thirty years ago, international crews have been drawn to what is now the largest single-day rowing event in the world. The international tradition continues today, as a record-number of foreign entries will race from the Boston University boathouse to Herter Park in the 31st edition of the regatta.

The first foreign crew to compete in the Head Of The Charles, Toronto's Argonaut Rowing Club, raced in the inaugural regatta in 1965, finishing fourth of five in the Championship Fours. It was an inauspicious start for a club that would go on to several titles in various events over the years, most recently the women's lightweight fours at last year's race.

International Presence

The first overseas entry came from England in 1967 when Adrian Wood from King's College, Cambridge raced in the Lightweight Single, beating two other scullers to place ninth. Subject to the same rules as domestic competitors, first-time foreign boats race at the back of the starting order, after the boats which earn starting positions based on the previous finish order. Racing through a dozen or more wakes on a river as twisted as the Charles for the first time provides a tough initiation for new crews.

In the 1970s, Canadian crews began to take notice of the race, entering and eventually winning events in significant numbers. Ottawa Rowing Club and University of Western Ontario joined the fray in 1970, followed by St. Catharines and Ridley in 1973. Ridley Graduates won the men's Championship Eight an amazing four straight years, after breaking the Naval Academy's streak of the same length in 1984. St. Catharines, in addition to many individual wins, owned the women's Championship Double title from 1985 until 1988, while their lightweight men's eight hold the record for consecutive wins in team boats tunate boycott of the 1980 Moscow Olympic Games led not only to the formation of the Charles River's 1980 Rowing Club but also the entry of several international crews left out of the Olympics by their governments. In addition to the Australian crews racing in the 1980 regatta, West Germany was represented by three eights and single sculler B. Riechmann.

Despite racing from the back of the starting order, Riechmann was still able to finish second to Charles River legend Tiff Wood, who was in the middle of his three year reign in the Championship Single. George Simeon, from the Belgian club C.R. Bruxelles, also did well from the back of the pack, finishing seventh.

The West German eight entered in the 1980 women's Championship event represented the first overseas women's entry, finishing 10th of 40 in the eight year-old event. The other West German eights, Osnabrucker RC and Deutscher Ruderverein, did well in men's Championship event. Osnabrucker finished highest, behind the winning Navy crew (on their way to a four year title run) but ahead of hometown Harvard. Deutscher Ruderverein took seventh.

Three years later, Swiss sculler F. Bachmann won the Master Singles, defeating Head of the Charles Trustee Steve Carr, who today helps oversee the administration of the regatta. Xeno Müller's win in last year's Championship Single gave Switzerland its second sculling title. Canada's Marnie McBean, world and Olympic champion in both sweep and sculling events, took advantage of seven-time champion Anne Marden's absence last year in winning the women's Championship Single.

In the decades leading up to this year's record for foreign entries, overseas entries have given some great performances. In 1989, Great Britain's men's open and lightweight national eights, entered as Tideway Scullers and Nottinghamshire County, respectively, charged through much of the pack to place second and third behind Philadelphia's perennially fast Penn AC. Buckingham Browne and Nichols School's Larry Cabot hosted a Youth Eight entry from Russia's Znamya in 1991. After finding Cabot's credit limit when he treated them to a shopping spree at the local New Balance shoe outlet, the Russian juniors narrowly lost to a Harvard eight. Other international junior crews have also been treated well by their hosts, who are often local college coaches happy to meet fast, young rowers.

with five, from 1980 through 1985 (a record the women of Boston Rowing Center tied last year).

A then-record 12 different Canadian clubs entered in 1977, fully establishing a presence at the regatta that has continued to grow. St. Catharines Rowing Club and Cambridge Boat Club are now sister clubs and today Canadian rowers make up 20 percent of all entrants.

The '80s brought both the expansion of countries represented and the speed of those crews. The unfor-

Dresdner Ruderverein E.V. (Germany) were the lone overseas winners in team boat events last year, taking the Club Fours by just over one second. In addition to Müller, Switzerland was well represented by Zürich's Grasshopper Club in the Championship Eights. Sons of the Thames, one of England's venerable London clubs, raced with the Cairo Police in the Championship Eight. Cairo Police, who are what their name suggests, also raced in the men's Championships Double with Croatia's AVK Mladost. All three are entered in the same events today.

This year, both the men's and women's Championship Eights trophies could very well clear customs at Logan come Monday morning. The Dutch National Team open men's and women's eights, medalists at this summer's World Championships in Tampere, Finland, will both race on the Charles. Also entered in the women's race is Nautilus Boat Club, from England. The men's Championship Eight will be contested among several overseas crews along with the many North American boats entered.

The French Lightweights at the 1993 race.

Also entered in the Championship Eight event, Club Nautico de Sevilla will represent Spain. Made up of lightweight oarsmen from the Spanish National Team, the club is grateful to their national federation, which will allow them to take this weekend off from training in Georgia in preparation for the Olympic Games. At this summer's World Championships, both the Spanish lightweight straight four and double finished high enough to qualify for the 1996 Olympic Games and will spend October training on Lake Lanier, site of the Olympic rowing venue. Sevilla's spares will race in the Championship Double. Mainzer Ruderverein, located on the confluence of the Main and Rhine Rivers in Germany, will also race in the men's Championship Eight. Mainzer Ruderverein, part of the mighty German club system (arguably the strongest in the world), feeds the perennially mighty German National Team, which won more medals than any other nation at both the junior and senior World Championships this summer.

Although the regatta now has men's and women's divisions in all events, overseas entries are yet to show the same equity. Aside from the aforementioned Championship Eights, only three other women's events will include overseas entries. The Dutch Rowing Federation has an entry in the Championship Doubles along with their two eights. Another Dutch club, K.R.Z.V. Het Spaarne, will compete in the Club Eights, for sub-championship crews. Galway Rowing Club's women's four passed twelve boats to finish tenth in the Club Fours event last year. Since their time was only 3.9 percent off the winners, their entry this year was guaranteed. Galway will also bring two men's crews, a Championship Double and Club Four.

This year, a crew from Japan will again race in the men's Lightweight Eight. The Tohoku University Crew Club will come from Sendai, cradle of rowing in Japan. Sendai crews have represented Japan at both the 1960 Rome Olympic Games and the 1976 and '77 World Championships.

Part of the growing master's field that precipitated the addition of more master categories in today's race are several overseas entries. A.S.R. Nereus, in addition to their Championship Eight entry, will race in the men's Master Eight. England's Upper Thames and Mortlake Anguan & Alpha Boat Club compete in the same event. The men's Master Fours this year includes Austria's Albatros Klagenfurt and Britain's Molesey Boat Club.

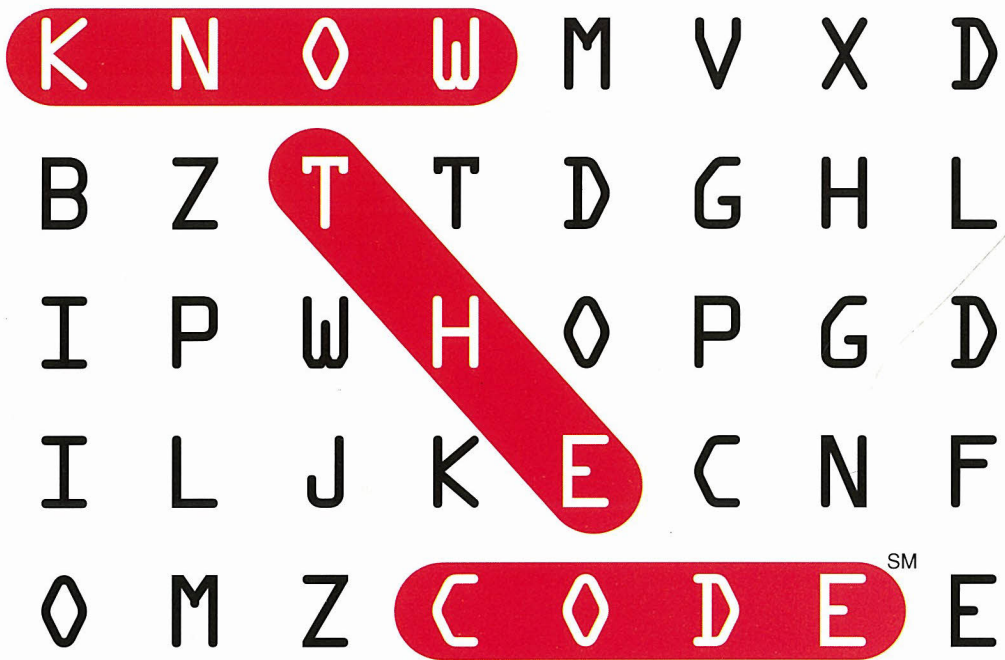

Reciprocating the trend of American crews traveling to England's rowing pageant, the Henley Royal Regatta, several British schools will make the trip to compete in today's race. The boys of Fitzwilliam College, Latymer Upper School, Norwich School, The King's School, and Westminster School will all gain admission to the tents, even without their blazers and ties.

From the single Canadian boat in 1965 through the recent proliferation of overseas crews, the number of foreign entries today illustrates how the regatta has grown. No longer just America's fall rowing classic, the Head Of The Charles is now also the world's, attracting some of the best international crews to three miles of the Charles that challenge and reward over 4500 athletes every year. ♦

From the Beginning

*By Steve

A sculler heads for the day's first race - club singles - toward the triangular start bouys across from

At 7:06 a.m. the sun comes up over the Charles River. The first rays of light create a dappling effect on the surface as you survey the Starting Line and fight back the butterflies in your stomach.

It's 7:15 a.m. as you slide your boat into the murky water to begin your warm-up for the Club Singles race — the first event of the day. You head for the group of scullers circling like a school of confused fish in the warm-up area. You begin to work the kinks out of your arms and shoulders, and you feel the warmth building in your quadriceps with each successive stroke.

In the distance you notice a member of the course committee in his launch fine-tuning the placement of some of the more than 600 racing lane buoys which define the course.

Then a Starter's voice barks out the ten-minute warning over the PA system at 7:40 a.m. and for some reason the sound of the Star Spangled Banner is making your adrenaline rush like never before.

the Boston University boathouse. Club singles involves marshaling over fifty singles with little room for error.

Your heart is pounding now as the Starter shouts “first boats in Club Singles queue up at the open end of the gauntlet.” The numbered boats are getting into sequence for the running start just as the five-minute warning is sounded. “Gentlemen, complete your warm-ups...” Then you’re told to “build to half speed!” And then, “build to three-quarter speed!”

At 7:48 a.m. the “Rules of Racing” are bellowed out to the competitors, telling you to keep two to three lengths of open water between your shell and the one in front of you as you cross the Starting Line... and that no passing is permitted prior to the BU Bridge.

Finally, just as you’ve maneuvered into your assigned slot, you hear the voice atop the BU Boathouse say, “proceed to full speed at your pleasure!” and you explode with all the power you can muster.

Next thing you know, you’re across the starting line — your arms straining against the resistance of the water, your legs pumping in cadence, and the sweat breaking on your brow as you begin to negotiate the serpentine, three-mile course. It is exactly 7:50 a.m.

This is what it'll be like — from the racer's perspective — at the start of the 31st Head Of The Charles regatta on October 22nd.

Less than nineteen minutes later, the race is all over for the first boat. But for the people behind the scenes at the Starting Line, the craziness has just begun.

Before the Start

Sixteen major events are held on that day between 7:50 a.m. and 4:50 p.m., before the day is done, 1,102 boats and 4,512 competitors will have crossed the starting line — in sequence — and as you can imagine, sound planning, precise timing and great teamwork are crucial.

"A good, clean start for each of the 16 events is the goal of the Starting Line Team," says Fred Schoch, Executive Director of the Head Of The Charles regatta, "and it's a great deal more complicated than one might think."

The planning begins long before race day, when the sixteen events are scheduled. "One key challenge," says Schoch, "is to make sure that the events are properly scheduled so that one race, as it is ending — is not overtaken by the leading boats from the next race."

"For example, the slowest race is the Veteran Singles, because the average age of the athletes in this race is in the mid-sixties. The Veteran Singles are followed by the Youth Fours, which are quite a bit faster. The Starting Line Team has to make sure that the Fours event is held back at the starting line so that it doesn't start too soon after the Veterans have stopped starting, creating the chance that it would start stopping before the Vets have stopped stopping at the finish line. Got it?"

All sixteen events are further split into Men's and Women's divisions. Men start first, followed by a two to four-minute hiatus, then the Women's division begins. Within the Men's and Women's divisions there are further segregations based on crews that are over 30 years of age (Masters) or under 30. It can get confusing, to say the least.

"Over the years, it has been much easier to start the Women's races than the Men's," according to Raoul Attager, longtime volunteer at the Starting Line. "The women are more composed as a group while the men's races tend to be more troublesome to deal with at the Starting Line." (Sorry, guys.)

On the roof

The challenge of organizing the start is undertaken by a team of volunteers who set up shop at the Boston University boathouse, a venerable old structure that sits on the river's edge just east of the BU Bridge. Boston University is a very generous host to the Regatta each year, allowing the Starting Line Team to build a temporary partition in the upstairs weight room of their Boathouse. The Boathouse becomes the "Operations Base" for the two dozen volunteers who will staff the Starting Line throughout the day.

Inside the boathouse, two dedicated 20-amp circuits are in place providing current for two PC's, a FAX machine, three amplifiers, six speakers and a coffee machine. A dozen stop watches from TAG-Heuer are in use here, and a large master clock display keeps everyone focused on the task at hand.

Here, there are two teams in place. The Computer Timing group, comprised of four people, will call each shell's bow number as it crosses the line — entering into the timing log the Start Time for each sculler or crew. A second team of eight "Hand-Timers" with stop watches will manually track and log every boat, providing a backup capability in the event of any high-tech glitches.

Outside, on the adjacent roof of the boathouse, a 16x16-foot deck is erected for the weekend, providing a platform for the Starting Line equipment, including the public address system, as well as the starters, boat spotters, a course umpire, radio operators, audio technicians and assorted people-watchers who are assembled to call the crews to the line. A canopy is put in place to protect the team from the elements, and a picket fence is there to keep them from taking a nasty dive off the roof.

“ It's kind of like herding cats. ”

Handle with CAUTION!

The fact that professional photographers use the Olympus® Infinity SuperZoom 3500 as their personal snapshot camera has been a source of confusion lately. People are making the erroneous assumption that anyone carrying an Olympus SuperZoom is a professional, and this leads to potentially awkward situations. Being mistaken for a member of the press can mean offers of hotel or airline discounts, preferential treatment at restaurants and even free admission to cultural events. Finding yourself wrongfully whisked into a VIP lounge, or cornered by some fame-addicted celebrity can be a disorienting experience – but luckily it is avoidable. In the event that you are mistaken for a professional because of your SuperZoom, simply explain that the only reason so many professionals are attached to it in the first place is that it's easy to use and takes great snapshots. Point out that the majority of SuperZoom owners are, in fact, just amateurs like yourself.* We at Olympus believe we'll all get through this difficult time, IF WE JUST USE A LITTLE COMMON SENSE.

THE CAMERA BEHIND THE CONFUSION

The Infinity SuperZoom 3500: 35-120mm Zoom, 4 automatic flash modes including red-eye reduction, weatherproof, precise autofocus, continuous shooting mode for 4 frames per second.

**As a precaution, avoid using words like 'ciao' or 'babe' since this might only aggravate the situation.*

"It's been much easier to start the Women's races than the Men's." Here, the Vesper women in a bow-coxed four.

The apparent chaos in the Starting Line Operations Base is nothing compared to the ruckus on the water. Crews circle nervously in their warm-up mode as they wait for instructions from the Starters above. Marshall boats try to keep order, communicating with Starting Line officials via two-way radio.

These Marshall boats are small motor launches borrowed from BU, MIT, Northeastern, Radcliffe, Harvard and other schools. Three or four of these boats patrol the Starting Line, each staffed with a Driver, one or two spotters, and a Marshall from the United States Rowing Association.

They patrol the area of the Upper Basin, upstream of Massachusetts Avenue Bridge. Their job is to guide the boats into the 150-yard long gauntlet at the start, which is made up of buoys in the shape of a funnel.

At the Start

Just getting boats to the Starting Line in the correct sequence can be, let's say, a major challenge.

"It's kind of like herding cats," says John Romain, a veteran volunteer with the Head Of The Charles since 1984. Romain serves as one of the two Starters this year, along with his colleague Bill Becklean (the coxswain in the Yale eight that won Olympic gold in Melbourne in 1956).

"These Marshall boats literally corral the competitors into the gauntlet," Romain says. "Marshalls must resolve any last minute crew disputes or problems, help some crews with any fixable equipment damage, and generally keep the crews herded upstream towards the finish line."

"If a crew has an equipment failure at this time, and the coxswain or sculler can get the boat to the BU dock and manage a quick repair, they are in real luck. If a crew is late to the Starting Line due to a mental lapse or problem, they will not be permitted to jump right into the sequence. They will be told to wait and start LAST in their division."

"This policy," adds Fred Schoch, "has met with the strong approval of both coaches and participants. After all, if 1,000 other boats can manage to get to the starting line on time, you should, too."

A crew may receive a 15-second penalty if it crosses the Starting Line outside of the Racing Lane. This is called a buoy violation. A crew may also be assessed a penalty by the Marshalls or the Starter if they refuse to comply with instructions, such as getting too close to the crew they follow without easing off. "Each crew is entitled to a clean start," Romain says with conviction. But this is more easily said than done.

There can be up to three different events on the course at one time totally as many as 360 shells: one warming up, one starting and one finishing and returning.

At the start of each event, all competing boats are identified by the Starter by name. Each boat has a bow marker indicating its starting sequence in its Event Division. This starting order is established either by a past performance in last year's event or by lottery if a sculler or crew is new to an event. Scullers and crews have the responsibility to locate the boat that precedes them, and once having done so, to follow that boat to the Starting Line.

Occasionally, competitors scratch from the competition at the last minute. All racers are advised of the scratches in their race, having them leapfrog over the missing boat, and stay in sequence. "It requires a fair amount of concentration — and a lot of patience," says the veteran Starter.

All day long Starters Romain and Becklean are exhorting the crews, shouting directions — and always — watching the clock. From 40 feet above the river, the Starting Line Team controls the action, ensuring fairness and safety for all competitors.

After the Start

Former Cornell varsity crew coach Findlay Meislahn paid the Starting Team the highest possible complement when he said simply, "The reason we like the Head Of The Charles regatta is because it is run very well and the races start on time."

When the last event of the day is done, the Start Team breaks down their base. The donut boxes and stale coffee are thrown out, the temporary doors and partition are removed, PA systems are unplugged, PC's and FAXes are disconnected, and the portable phones and two-way radios are inventoried for return on Monday.

Weary, hoarse but with a feeling of accomplishment, the Starting Line Team can go home, confident in the knowledge that 4,512 competitors have received a fair start. ♦

A World Class Effort

Hosting the regatta is achieved through teamwork

For the last thirty years, the regatta has relied on many special individuals to achieve its goal of providing a world

The administration of the Head Of The Charles regatta, once a relatively simple task involving a handful of dedicated members from within the host organization, Cambridge Boat Club, has evolved into a complex, year-round activity encompassing scores of committees, sub-contractors and sponsors. It is no longer an easy or brief task to prepare for an event of this magnitude and have it run

Twelve months of planning are now required to oversee and connect the innumerable jobs which make up the intricate wiring of the regatta. To make this engine run, the event first needs fuel in its tank. And we are fortunate to have genuine commitments from BayBank, J.Crew and TAG Heuer. Powerbar has been with us since 1993 and for the first time this year, AT&T corporation will participate at the regatta. These companies provide the vital starter fluid which permits the Head Of The Charles to operate as a lantern for all other rowing regattas.

Assisting the regatta in secondary but meaningful ways are many other firms which have given generously of their time and effort. Our thanks to Clarke & Company Public Relations for running this year's PR efforts. As the event has steadily grown, so too has the demand from the media for information on athletes and crews. For the past five years, David Foster has provided skill in photography which has helped our event publications achieve a high standard of excellence. Joan Hewson, of Event Management International, has also worked for five years on site planning and operations and convinced us in 1994 to house the Head Of The Charles Rowing and Fitness Exhibition under one large, tented roof at Magazine Beach. Finally, to Pam Creager, the event food vendor coordinator, thanks for a job well done and our best wishes to you as you relocate to Illinois. Our gratitude is deep to these firms as well as countless others not recognized here.

During the past thirty years, the regatta has relied on many special individuals to achieve its goal of providing a world-class racing opportunity for rowers around the world. This year is no exception. Outstanding leadership during 1995 from K. C. King and Roger Borggaard has kept the event on focus and we thank them both for hundreds of hours of time and creativity in overseeing the ten race chairs and thirty-two sub-chairs which make up event's organizational flow chart.

Finally, Ed Smith, a visionary regatta trustee for the last nine years, is stepping down this November. Involved in the business-side of the race since the late 1970's, we owe a mountain of debt to Ed for his exceptional contributions to the regatta. As a certified public accountant and a lawyer, Ed's training has been tapped regularly to guide the regatta through previously uncharted territory. Thanks Ed, for a job well done and don't leave town, we may need you again! ♦

Commitment To A Great Tradition

At BayBank, we're proud to sponsor the 31st Head Of The Charles® regatta.

In this, our sixth year as presenting sponsor, our commitment includes raising awareness of the fragile Charles River ecosystem, enhancing spectators' enjoyment on race-day, even publishing regatta results on the World Wide Web.

We'd like to thank everyone involved with the regatta, especially the competitors, for sharing our commitment to keeping this great tradition going strong.
